

A collection of noteworthy and topical articles we found helpful this month.

- » The latest data from MarketScout shows that commercial insurance rates are still moving upward. The average rate increase was 7% in the first quarter.
Read More
- » A popular email services was hacked. Experts are still trying to understand the scope of the damage, but significant long-tail claims could be coming.
Read More
- » More than one year into the pandemic, the question of whether there's business interruption coverage for COVID-19 remains unanswered.
Read More
- » Between the ice storm that hit Texas and other Gulf Coast states and storms that struck the U.S. earlier in the season, the 2020-2021 winter season could be a costly one for insurers.
Read More
- » Medical liability premiums are increasing, and an AMA analysis warns this could lead to practice viability and care access issues.
Read More
- » Between November 2019 and November 2020, telehealth claim lines rose nearly 3,000%.
Read More
- » Climate change is leading to new exposures for architects and engineers.
Read More
- » In many ways, 2020 was an "underwriter's nightmare." Here's how the EPLI market is responding to COVID, equality and diversity concerns, wage-and-hour enforcement and more.
Read More
- » The non-profit insurance sector is getting more challenging. Here's where we were seeing the most hardening.
Read More
- » Cyberattacks on schools hit record-breaking numbers in 2020 – and ransomware is only part of the problem.
Read More
- » Fresh capital is helping the directors and officers liability market, but challenges – including diversity, climate change and more – remain.
Read More